

Readings to accompany "A New World: Philosophical Idealism in America, 1700 to 1950"

Lecture I

You can find all of the suggested readings in the Works of Jonathan Edwards through <<http://edwards.yale.edu/research/browse>>, at Yale University's Jonathan Edwards Center. After reaching that address, click on Scientific and Philosophical Writings (WJE Online Vol. 6). Then find "Of Being," pp. 202-8.

If you're unfamiliar with Berkeley's immaterialism, you might find it helpful to read A Treatise concerning the Principles of Human Knowledge, sections 1-33 (not the Introduction), which is widely available in print and online.

Lecture II

At <<http://edwards.yale.edu/research/browse>>, click on Original Sin (WJE Online Vol. 3). Look in Part Four, Chapter Three for pp. 397-413 (beginning with "Second Difficulty").

Lecture III

Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nature (in the 1836 edition), at <<http://www.rwe.org/complete-works/i--nature,-addresses-&-lectures/248-nature-1836-complete-book.html>>.

Lecture IV

In any edition of Henry David Thoreau's Walden, which is readily available online, read "Economy," "Where I Lived, and What I Lived For," "Spring," and "Conclusion."

Lecture V

The 1885 edition of Josiah Royce's The Religious Aspect of Philosophy can be found through Google Books. Read chapter 11, "The Possibility of Error," pp. 384-431.

Lecture VI

At Stanford University's <<http://mlk-kpp01.stanford.edu/>>, click on "King Papers Project" and then search for "My Pilgrimage to Nonviolence."

Kenneth P. Winkler
January 14, 2012